BEFORE YOU BEGIN

How to Use This Journal

This is not a budget spreadsheet. It is a transformation record. Read this page before Day 1.

"A rite of passage is not comfortable. It is necessary."

— Sid Morrison Washington

The Structure

This journal has six parts: an Opening Rite, three Monthly Reviews, thirteen Weekly Spreads, ninety Daily Reflection pages, a Legacy Ledger, and a Closing Rite. Work through them in order.

The Daily Reflection

Every day has one prompt and space to write. The prompt is about money, identity, or legacy. It takes 5 minutes. Do not skip days — the value is in the streak, not in any single entry.

The Weekly Spread

Every Sunday (or whichever day you choose), complete your weekly spread. It takes 15 minutes. You will track income, expenses, a win, a leak, and one ownership move you made.

The Monthly Review

At the end of months 1, 2, and 3, complete the full monthly review. This is 30 minutes of honest accounting — not just money, but mindset, decisions, and direction.

The Legacy Ledger

Any time you make a decision that moves you toward ownership — buying an asset, starting a product, cutting a matrix expense, investing in your brand — record it in the Legacy Ledger at the back.

Honesty over performance

This journal is not for show. No one is grading you. Write what is actually true. The gap between where you are and where you want to be is not a problem — it is the map.

DAY ZERO

The Opening Rite

Before Day 1, complete this page. This is your starting point — the before. You will return to it on Day 90.

Complete the following sentences without editing yourself. Write what is true right now.

My relationship with money right now is best described as:

The word I most associate with wealth is:

The thing I spend money on that I am not proud of is:

The financial decision I keep postponing is:

What I am most afraid of financially:

What I am building — or want to build — is:

I will know this 90-day rite of passage worked if:

Your Starting Numbers

Record your honest financial snapshot today. These numbers are not a judgment — they are a baseline.

Monthly income (all sources)	$ _____
Monthly fixed expenses total	$ _____
Monthly variable spending total	$ _____
Current savings / cash on hand	$ _____
Total debt (approximate)	$ _____
Assets I currently own (property, business, investments)	_____
Monthly amount currently going toward building / investing	$ _____

In one sentence — what does this snapshot tell you?

The Legacy Ledger

Every new or move decision, no matter how small, is evidence of the person you are becoming. Of of passage.

What counts as a Legacy Ledger entry:

- Purchasing an asset (domain, tool, property, business stake)
- Launching or updating a product, service, or brand element
- Opening or contributing to a savings, investment, or retirement account
- Eliminating a matrix expense and redirecting that capital
- Making a decision for future generations instead of immediate gratification
- Investing in skills, education, or tools that build your brand or income
- Creating or protecting intellectual property (writing, recording, registering)
- Any financial boundary set — with yourself or someone else

The format is simple: Date — Decision — Why it matters — What it builds.
Use the following pages throughout your 90 days. Do not wait for something big.
The ledger builds with every entry. So do you.

DAY 90

The Closing Rite

You made it to Day 90. Now go back to your Opening Rite and read what you wrote on Day Zero. Then complete this page.

"The person who started on Day 1 is not the person finishing on Day 90."

Complete the following. Compare your answers to what you wrote on Day Zero.

My relationship with money today is best described as:

The belief I have most successfully rewired in 90 days:

The financial decision I am most proud of making:

The matrix habit I have most successfully interrupted:

What I am building — and how it has become more specific:

The single most important thing I learned about myself in 90 days:

Your Closing Snapshot

Record your numbers today. Then compare them to your Opening Rite snapshot.

Monthly income today (all sources)	$ _____
Monthly fixed expenses today	$ _____
Monthly variable spending today	$ _____
Current savings / cash on hand	$ _____
Total debt today (approximate)	$ _____
Assets I now own that I did not own on Day 1	_____
Monthly amount going toward building / investing today	$ _____

Compared to Day Zero — what changed the most?

The rite of passage is complete. What is your first move in the next 90 days?

I completed the Rite of Passage. I am not who I was on Day 1.
